MISAPPROPRIATED $50,000.

Carriage Company Wrecked by One of St. Paul's Foremost Hustlers.

St. Paul, Sept. 22.—Business and social circles were shocked last evening upon learning that Julius H. Burwell, vice president, treasurer and general manager of the Mast, Buford & Burwell Carriage Company, was charged with the misappropriation of $50,000 of the funds of the firm. The firm was forced into an assignment on Monday by the financial methods of Mr. Burwell, Victor Robinson being selected as assignee. The complaint charges that Burwell has been a member of the firm for eight years, at a salary of $5,000 a year, and, as treasurer, has, at all times, had access to the funds of the firm. It states that Burwell, instead of taking the $50,000, which was his rightful due annually, appropriated to his own use sums far in excess of the amount stipulated. Of the amount wrongfully taken, $10,000 is charged to have been taken in money, and the remainder in carriages and other merchandise. Among the items given is one of $3,000 which General Manager Burwell alleged to have taken for the purpose of erecting a fine residence at No. 103 Summit avenue. The firm of Mast, Buford & Burwell, therefore, asks judgment against Julius H. Burwell for the sum of $50,000. Burwell has been considered one of the leading citizens of Minnesota. Last year he was president of the State Agricultural Society, and, last June, he was the central figure in carrying out the programme of the Hill celebration. He is a prominent Freeman, and has long been known as one of the foremost hustlers of St. Paul.

Voorhees Accepts a Proposition from the Silverites.

The Senate Will Hereafter Meet at 11 O'clock and Adjourn at 6 in the Evening.

CLOTURE NOT A POSSIBILITY

Both Repealers and Antis Confident of Final Victory.

Features of Yesterday's Debate—Action of the Lower House on Clerks for Committees.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—It is improbable that such a condition of affairs ever existed in the Senate as now confronts that body.

Without cloture it seems next to an impossibility to ever reach a vote upon the silver repeal bill. It would be even more difficult to adopt cloture than the impending silver bill itself. If the Republicans assist the repeal Democrats in securing cloture they destroy the only weapon they have for defeating the diabolical bill before the House repealing the federal election laws and also the measure repealing the law requiring proof of loyalty in pension cases. Without Republican assistance the Democrats in the Senate cannot secure cloture, and yet a distinguished Republican Senator, Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, has proposed cloture. He is backed, too, by the leading Republicans of the Senate, mostly those from New England, and encouraged by no Democrats. The situation is exasperating to Chairman Voorhees and he is left in a fog.

Closure having been offered by Republicans, for the express purpose of repealing the silver purchasing law, and refused by the Democratic leaders, the Journal correspondent is assured by high authority in the Senate that not only will the Republicans not be helped by cloture, but that the Senate, under rules of debate, to defeat the federal election and other offensive political measures, but they may defeat the final cloture bill, which will prevent the House will pass during the coming few months. This the Democrats have invited. Republicans in the Senate say they will oppose the Democrats to the bitter end, and the time when it shall go into operation, or there shall be no final vote upon the tariff bill in the Senate. The Democrats have chosen to place themselves at the mercy of the minority, and the Republicans have determined to take advantage of the situation. It would seem that, after all the speeches, and I want to get them off. What I am saying is very interesting to me.

AN ALLEGED AGREEMENT.
Senator Voorhees's effort to curtail debate in the Senate took a new turn this afternoon, but it is doubtful whether it accomplished the purpose desired by the Senator. Just before adjournment Mr. Voorhees rose and said: "I may say that a consultation has taken place this afternoon between myself and Senators on this side and Senators on the other side of the chamber, friends and opponents of the pending measure, which has resulted substantially as I understand, in an agreement as to the hours which we will occupy in debate, at least for some time to come. Without going into details, I am warranted in moving that on Monday, and from that time on, the hour of meeting of the Senate shall be 11 o'clock instead of 12, with the understanding that an adjournment will take place at 6. That gives seven hours of session, and the same as we have been struggling for by prolonging the session into the evening. I think seven hours, Mr. President, for the present, is a sufficient time to keep the Senate together during one day. I am assured that there are ten or twelve Senators who desire to discuss the question of silver, and I have no right to have any exception, and have none. I have every reason to believe that a legitimate, fair debate has been exhausted, and that when every man here has said what he thinks ought to be said by him from his place, for the constitution and for the cause, the vote is very near at hand. There is no power, after fair and full debate is completely exhausted, to waste the time of the country or of the Senate. I say this without committing anybody, except myself, but I have given this subject a careful attention as I am capable of doing. I, therefore, Mr. President, move that the motion that the Senate meet at 11 o'clock on Monday, and from that date, until further order, at the same hour, and that the Senate adjourn at 6 o'clock daily, will supersede the struggle for continuous session this evening and to-morrow evening, which would by no means be productive of fruitful results, and would be a waste of time. It must be taken notice of, Mr. President, that the extension of time in the evening is exceedingly inconvenient to the members, and that when they are after being compelled to meet and sit all night or not at least we are not in that situation at the present time. I make this motion to discuss the question of silver, and I ask, Mr. President, the consent of the Senate to that proposition."

There was no objection and the Chair declared it so ordered. The arrangement was engineered by Senators Jones, of Arkansas, and Faulkner, and was consented to by the majority of the Senate. It was an agreement to be satisfactory on both sides of the chamber, and when assured, as he was, that the silver issue would be consumed the time after a reasonable adjournment hour by dilatory motions and that with such assurance as to give credit to the report that a canvass of the bill would be compelled to do the talking.

REPEAL MEN CONFIDENT.
Mr. Voorhees feels that friends of the bill achieved a signal triumph yesterday in showing the disparity between their members and those of the opposition, as was done by the two votes taken, and that the country should accept this as an assurance of the success of the measure when a vote shall be reached, and that no advantage can be gained by a futile attempt to prolong the working hours into the night. The repeal men are still hopeful of reaching a vote at a comparatively early day, and are confident that the silver issue will be first week in October. It will be observed that this will be in time to get the bill out of the way for the federal elections bill, if that bill should come over from the House of Representatives on the 9th of October, as it probably will. They say, however, that even in case the federal elections bill should reach the Senate before the final bill is out of the way there will be no danger of displacing the latter measure with the former, and they make this assertion with such assurance as to give credit to the report that a canvass of the Senate has been made upon this point and the result has proven satisfactory to the repeal leaders.

The silver Senators spent the greater part of the day in conferences among themselves, looking to the closing of their lines and to preparing themselves for any sudden assault like that of yesterday. They do not propose to be taken by surprise again, and will be prepared for an emergency. They believe that the agreement reached to-day will insure to their benefit, and are very much pleased with it. They can talk for a reasonable length of time each day until that bill can be brought in, and that they will find other means of putting in the time until then, if forced to sit beyond the ordinary adjournment hour, which they do not consider at all probable under the agreement entered into to that effect. It is understood that this agreement is for only one week, but it is presumed that, if necessary, it will be renewed at the expiration of that time.

CLOTURE DISCUSSED.

The cloture proposition was the subject of discussion until 2 o'clock in the Senate to-day, when the repeal bill, being the finished business, was taken up. Two speeches by the Colorado Senators were made against any change in the rules of the Senate providing for cloture of debate. Mr. McPherson gave notice that after Mr. Turpie shall have spoken on the resolution to-morrow morning he should insist that it go to the calendar, whence it would take affirmative action to get it before the Senate. This may not be done, however, as Senator Platt, its author, desires its reference to the committee on rules. The opponents of repeal occupied the Senate—Senators Wolcott and Teller—in the morning, against a change of rules, and incidentally against repeal, and Senators George, Hansbrough and Stewart against the repeal of the purchasing clauses of the silver act. The bill also repeals the Sherman act, and provides that owners of silver bullion may deposit in the mint, which, less 20 percent, (to be deducted for seigniorage and coined into silver dollars, and put in the treasury, shall be coined into standard dollars for his benefit.

Mr. Cockrell offered a resolution calling for information as to the coinage of silver dollars since 1878, which was read. When the Chair put the question on the resolution, apparently, there was one vote in the affirmative and one in the negative. "The vote seems to be evenly divided," said the Vice President. "The Chair will vote yes." [Laughter.] This was the first decisive vote Mr. Stewart has cast in the Senate. The resolution of Mr. Platt for a cloture rule was then taken up, and Mr. Wolcott addressed the Senate in opposition to it. He said there was but one way to still debate in the Senate. That method was by cloture. Such a resolution could be voted upon far earlier than could the repeal bill. With great respect for Mr. Voorhees' offer from him that it was impossible to reach a vote on such a resolution. If the Senate desired a vote on a cloture resolution it could have it without much delay. There would be no extraordinary methods used to prevent a vote on a cloture resolution. He would content himself with voting against it. Let the Senate determine once for all whether there should be a cloture rule in the Senate. If there be failure to pass such a question, or if those who favored repeal declined to pass cloture, then criticism upon the opponents of repeal must cease. Debate could be stifled by rules, and in no other way.

Mr. Teller occupied the remainder of the time until 2 o'clock in a speech against the proposed change in the rules. The repeal bill was taken up and Mr. George concluded his speech, begun on Wednesday, against the bill. Mr. Hansbrough then addressed the Senate. He closed at 5 o'clock.

Then Mr. Stewart proceeded to argue that gold had risen in value while silver had remained the stable measure of value. While he was speaking Senators Joseph Teller and Butler in turn sought to have him yield for a motion to adjourn, but the Nevada Senator preferred to talk. "No," he said, "I want to have half a dozen speeches, and I want to get them off. What I am saying is very interesting to me."

It was apparent from the frequent conferences among Senators that some agreement was in process of formation, and when Mr. Stewart finally sat down Mr. Wolcott announced an amendment to the present given above. Mr. Voorhees then moved an executive session, after which the Senate adjourned.

BRIEF SESSION OF THE HOUSE.

Motion to Reconsider the Vote Depriving committees of Clerks Voted Down.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—After approval of the journal the consideration of the motion of the committee on accounts assigning clerks to committees was resumed by the House, the pending question being a motion to lay upon the table a motion to reconsider the vote by which the House agreed to the substitute depriving certain smaller committees of their clerks. The motion to reconsider was tabled—yeas, 143; nays, 57. The vote then returned on the report of committee on accounts, and it was agreed to.

Mr. Loud, rising to a question of privilege, and more than a week ago, offered a resolution and had it referred to the committee on judiciary. The committee had not, as required by the rules, to report the resolution, and the House discharged the committee from its consideration, and that the resolution be now considered. The resolution requested the Attorney General to communicate to the House such instructions as could be forwarded to officers of the Department of Justice relating to the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion laws. The resolution was adopted, as was also a resolution calling for similar information from the Secretary of the Treasury as to instructions sent to collectors, etc.

Then the House proceeded, after a brief discussion, to assign an additional clerk to the committee on claims. Then came a report from the committee on accounts, assigning an additional clerk to the committee on naval affairs. The vote resulted: Yeas, 103; nays, 70—no quorum, and the House, at 2:30, adjourned.

Annual Report of the Census Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The annual report of Superintendent Robert P. Porter, of the Census Bureau, was submitted to the Secretary of the Interior to-day. The census bureau during the year ending June 30, 1892, the total number of clerks now engaged in the census work is 1,050. Eight regular bulletins have been issued and 14,500 pages of matter relating to the census printed. A special report on irrigation has been completed and is being prepared for publication. The total number of mortgages in the United States is shown to be 4,303,661. Superintendent Porter concludes his report thus: "While some of the work has not come quite up to the standard we had hoped to attain, for reasons entirely outside of the control of those in charge of it, it can be truthfully said of the eleventh census that there has been no absolute failure in any of its details. Everything undertaken will be completed, though in some cases with less detail than originally planned."

Belittling the Tin-Plate Industry.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—In the Ford Theater disaster case, this afternoon, counsel for the defense filed a demurrer to the first indictment. Ainsworth, Dant, Sasse and Covert, the indicted men, were arraigned on the second indictment, found necessary on account of clerical error in the first, and made a formal plea of "not guilty," with permission to withdraw. The arguments on the demurrer will be heard next Friday morning before Justice McConnaughey.

Representative Breckinridge's Plea.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—It is stated on excellent authority that the plea of Representative Breckinridge, of Kentucky, in the suit brought by Miss Pollard, will be of an exceedingly brief and formal character. The plea will be that which is known to the legal profession as the plea of general issue. In other words, the plea will

Van Allen May Not Be Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—There is considerable talk on the floor of the Senate regarding the appointment of Mr. J. Van Allen to be ambassador to Italy, and, while the appointment has not been before the Senate a sufficient length of time to permit a thorough canvass of its fitness, the sentiment so far developed is certainly adverse to Mr. Van Allen, and it has become evident that his confirmation will be quite strongly opposed.

General Notes.
